

WHO WE ARE

Freie Universität Berlin is one of Europe's leading research universities. The Center for Global Politics is a pioneer in blended-learning formats and designed for students, professionals and leaders who wish to deepen their understanding of today's global challenges. It was founded by Prof. Dr. Klaus Segbers in 2007.

The Seasonal School in Shanghai is the best thing that happened to me this year. I was truly happy to meet fantastic new people who have become close friends. Our sessions were exciting each day. I learned so much due to the well-organized program and interactive approach.

The discussed agenda at the Seasonal School in Greece and the well-organized seminars provided a milestone to my academic background. And the international environment and students from all around the world made it a competitive, interesting and an added-value experience.

Chrysidis Kyriakos, Greece

The GPSS in Cambodia was a worthy experience considering the critical knowledge I gained, the various readings I utilized, the participatory discussions I was part of, the engaging session my group delivered and the fun activities, such as simulation, sport, city tour and more.

GLOBAL POLITICS SEASONAL SCHOOLS

EMBARK ON OUR GLOBAL JOURNEY

Global Politics Seasonal Schools are innovative and intensive short-term certificate programs in various locations all around the world. Jointly organized by the Center for Global Politics at Freie Universität Berlin and a renowned partner university abroad, each school brings together highly qualified students and first-rate scholars to exchange and debate global political and economic phenomena.

EUROPE, ASIA, AND THE MIDDLE EAST

Lasting up to two weeks, Global Politics Seasonal Schools are held in dynamic cities like Hanoi, Phnom Penh, Amman, Istanbul, Athens, Tehran, and Shanghai. The seminars comprise state of the art teaching methods, ranging from working groups to simulation games and online discussions. Outside the classroom, we offer an exciting supporting program, including company visits, roundtable discussions with experts, and excursions.

STUDENTS

Up to 30 participants are admitted to each Seasonal School. The majority of seats are reserved for applicants from the partner countries and that region but a small number of students from Germany and other countries are also admitted. After completing their course, students are welcome to join our active network of over 850 alumni from all around the world.

YOUR OPPORTUNITY

Our Seasonal Schools are an enriching learning experience, enabling you to:

- Improve your analytical skills and gain in-depth knowledge of important topics in global politics
- Earn an internationally recognized certificate from a top university worth 3 - 5 ECTS credit points
- Learn about new careers with global companies or academic training options
- Meet advanced students, young professionals, scholars and experts from around the world in some of the most fascinating cities
- Join our dynamic alumni network and remain connected through regional alumni meetings and our active online community

INNOVATIVE CURRICULUM

We develop each Seasonal School in close cooperation with the partner universities and public and private organizations. The curriculum encompasses varying topics reflecting current developments and debates in global politics. In addition to covering issues specific to respective host countries and their regions, the courses address the following themes:

- New Approaches to Global Politics
- EU Integration and External Relations
- Conflict Resolution
- Civil Society
- Reconciliation processes
- Media and International Politics
- Global City Regions

ADMISSION REQUIREMENTS

If you are interested in joining one of our Seasonal Schools, you will need to satisfy these requirements:

- A first degree (B.A. or equivalent) in Political Science, International Relations or a related subject
- Proficiency in English
- Strong interest in an internationally oriented career
